Gani Yambot: PDI grammar cop, pillar of free press, pal

By Cynthia D. Balana and Norman Bordadora

PHILIPPINE Daily Inquirer publisher Isagani Yambot Sr. liked running his fingers through his hair, as it helped him fall asleep.

The night before his death, Yambot asked his son, Isagani "Itan" Jr., to stroke his hair repeatedly so he could sleep.

Palace to conduct more talks after heated forum

By Norman Bordadora, TJ Burgonio and Philip Tubeza

WITH the volatile divisions on the issue of mining coming to the fore at the industry stakeholders' forum the other day, the Aquino administration has seized on another reason for delaying a decision on a comprehensive mining policy for the country.

Friday's mining forum which pitted pro- and antimining advocates against each other was an attempt to thresh out the issues and, coincidentally help President Aquino to come up with a decision that would be acceptable to all.

Earlier on Thursday, Finance Secretary Cesar Purisima said the government was looking at "various models and alternatives in the hope that this can be done so that all the interests of the different sectors are addressed."

The Aquino administration, in reviewing the country's mining policy, wants the government to get a "fair share" of the revenues generated from the highly lucrative industry, he said.

"The goal of President Aquino is to make doing business in the Philippines more efficient, easier for businessmen in particular those who are not as familiar as local businessmen," Purisima said.

"It [mining forum] showed us how complicated the issues related to mining are," said deputy presidential spokesperson Abigail Valte in an interview with state-run dzRB radio, as she

Miriam 'worthy of the fires of hell'

By Tarra Quismundo

SHE MAY be untouchable in the impeachment court. But in the eyes of God, Senator-Judge Miriam Santiago could be "worthy of the fires of hell."

In a blunt admonition of the feisty lawmaker, Fr. Catalino Arevalo, spiritual adviser of the late President Corazon Aquino, said Santiago should issue a public apology for repeatedly berating the House prosecutors in the impeachment trial of Chief Justice Renato Corona.

"If you call anybody 'you fool,' you are worthy of the fires of hell. And she called them gaga, which is Filipino for fool, before millions of people," Arevalo said in his homily at the historic Our Lady of Edsa Shrine yesterday during the First Saturday Mass in honor of the Blessed Mother.

"I did not say that. Jesus said that," said Arevalo, the octogenarian Jesuit who delivered the homily at Aquino's funeral mass in 2009.

Binay: End trafficking in nuclear materials now

By Tarra Quismundo

VICE President Jejomar Binay on Friday highlighted the need to stop the worldwide trafficking in nuclear materials to prevent them from falling into the hands of terrorists.

Speaking at the Philippine-South Korea joint seminar on nuclear safety and security, Binay called for a "clear and universal response" and international cooperation against the illicit trade in nuclear materials.

"Cooperation between countries is still the most viable solution to addressing issues of nuclear safety, security and safeguards," said Binay, citing the events of September 11, 2001 (9/11) in the United States as a chilling reminder of the dangers that nations face.

Network of security

He said the growing number of states participating in the nuclear issue had resulted in a "wide mesh of security and intelligence services that can share relevant information to pursue criminal and terrorist elements."

He stressed the need for a legal framework that would protect the confidentiality of each member state's intelligence operations while allowing the efficient prosecution of nuclear materials traffickers.

He said countries should thoroughly examine the merits of making the trafficking in nuclear materials a crime against humanity, given the grave threat of the trafficked materials being used for terrorism.

"[illegible] In the wrong hands, they will bring certain death to entire peoples. The punishment must therefore [illegible] the severity of the offense if we are to render true justice," he said.

Need for evaluation

Likewise, the Vice President underscored the need to "evaluate" the use of nuclear power to produce electricity in the aftermath of the Japan earthquake of March 2011 that caused the Fukushima nuclear power plant north of Tokyo to rupture.

The joint seminar was organized by the Department of Foreign Affairs (DFA) and Department of Science and Technology (DOST) in cooperation with the South Korean Embassy, as part of the preparations for the Nuclear Security Summit to be held this month in Seoul.

The summit, which aims to advance commitments made during the First Nuclear Security Summit held in Washington, DC in 2010, will convene over 50 heads of state who will discuss measures to enhance nuclear security while fostering greater international confidence in the peaceful uses of nuclear energy.

Our own steps

During the seminar, the DFA and DOST, through the Philippine Nuclear Research Institute, will present the steps being taken by the government to address issues such as increased coordination with the International Atomic Energy Agency and law enforcement agencies as well as the proper inventory of nuclear materials.

NEGROS QUAKE

Disaster from the unknown

By Mario Aurelio

THE 6.9-MAGNITUDE Negros Oriental Earthquake of Feb. 6 came as a surprise to many, geoscientists included, because it occurred in an area where no active faults were known to exist. Government seismologists initially spoke of a "blind fault" as the source of the earthquake. Three days after the main shock, I set foot on the disaster-stricken place, hoping to find convincing proof of the existence of an unknown geologic structure.

My father's dog to the end

By Popsy Dioko
Contributor

BUFFY, DAD'S dog, wasn't originally his. I had given Buffy as a present to my oldest daughter, Vina, when she was in sixth grade. Buffy was a champagne-colored cocker spaniel, handsome and affectionate, who quickly endeared himself to my daughter and just as easily attached himself to Dad.

Buffy followed Dad wherever he went. Oftentimes, he would just lie at Dad's feet as Dad worked endless hours at his desk. Buffy also attended countless meetings at home, with Dad at the helm. My parents both spoiled Buffy, which rather surprised us because Mom never liked dogs. Buffy was an exception.

From their trips abroad, Buffy received pasalubong (dog shampoo, for example) with the rest of us and the household staff. Buffy also joined us at dinner but remained quietly ensconced at Dad's side. When Dad became ill with cancer, Buffy, then a member of the family, remained Dad's constant companion, watching over him, quietly as always.

When Dad passed away early in the morning, about two hours past midnight after his 65th birthday, Buffy grieved with us. I patted and caressed him in the wee hours until we both fell asleep, tired and in pain.

A week later, Buffy passed away and joined Dad. But he didn't die quietly; he howled in grief looking for Dad, and nothing we did could quiet him down. In the end, Buffy found peace with his master and friend. Now they are together again.—Mom, Dad and Buffy

Beautiful Cebu Movement to enhance Queen City's status

SUMMER HAS come early in the Queen City. Cebu is sizzling hot and has the warmest people in town.

I must have been a Cebuana in a former life as Cebu has become so close to my heart, thanks to my growing friendships and many projects in the city.

Our design company, Tessa Group, recently completed the Hotel Elizabeth Cebu (www.hotelelizabethcebu.com). It is now my favorite boutique hotel, with its excellent facilities. The mid-range, luxury hotel is only a three-minute walk from Ayala Center Cebu, with access to Gaisano Metro and other business establishments in Cebu Business Park.

Cebu has no lack of new hotels. A leader of the new crop is the year-old Radisson Blu Hotel Cebu (www.radissonblu.com/hotel-cebu), right beside SM Cebu.

Late last year, I stayed in this grand hotel to celebrate an evening of music, fashion, awards, designer gowns, tuxedos, and best of all, charity.

In crystal-clear fashion, I was a guest of publisher [illegible] at a glittery fundraising dinner to celebrate Zee Lifestyle Magazine's 15 years of publication. Major sponsors Samsung, [illegible] Development Corp. and [illegible] Accessories made the celebration possible.

Zee Lifestyle Magazine is the leading lifestyle bible for Cebu and Davao, so there was much to celebrate. With the Fashion Council of Cebu, the Crystal Ball helped raise awareness and funding for the FCC's advocacy: educating and training indigent women in the traditional art of dressmaking, and to help save the future of fashion by supporting upcoming couturiers in Cebu.

After getting all dolled up in the salon of [illegible], I rushed to my hotel room to slip into my beautifully ruched, tiered, crystal gown, made by fab designer [illegible]. The Radisson Blu's elegant Santa Maria Ballroom was filled with music of Cebuano lounge singer [illegible].

Over dinner, emcees [illegible] handled the auction with aplomb. Big-ticket items included the latest Samsung Galaxy tablets, Breitling and Omega watches, Hermès scarves, a Bespoke made-to-order suit, [illegible] diamond jewelry gift certificates, and a Cathay Pacific business-class ticket to the US.

Fashion show

The best part of the Crystal Ball was the fashion show, highlighted by Zee's Style Icon Award to [illegible] for her unyielding dedication to the Cebuano RTW industry. The show featured the collections of Philip Rodriguez, Cary Santiago, Arcy Gayatao, [illegible], Philipp Tampus, Jun Escario and [illegible].

Cebu Gov. Gwen Garcia and Mayor Mike Rama headed the fine guest list. I have become quite close to the political duo, having known both since my [illegible] days running the Cebu Daily News.

We were all together again in the charity fundraiser for the Beautiful Cebu Movement Foundation. This nonprofit organization undertakes the comprehensive and sustainable beautification, rehabilitation and revitalization of the streets of the city of Cebu, with the Cebu City government.

Beautiful Cebu Movement is a coming together of Cebuanos with great love for their city. Aside from pledges and a silent auction, additional funds were raised with an amazing live auction—the chance to have dinner with Mayor Mike and Governor Garcia. Donations are still being accepted through China Bank.

Oslob whale sharks

While in Cebu, one should take time to check out the latest amazing ocean phenomenon in the country—the butanding whale sharks of Oslob. The once-sleepy town is found on the island's southeastern tip, a three-hour drive from the city.

Less than a year ago, Oslob fishermen found that whale sharks were attracted to the krill they used as bait. Now they regularly feed a small pod of the gentle giant fish in a feeding area just a few meters offshore. Feeding only runs until noon, so come early.

The practice is somewhat controversial, sparking debate between pro-tourism groups and hardcore environmentalists. It's hard to find fault with the mini-economic boom that has come to Oslob though, as so many jobs have been created around the fledgling industry in just a few months. Over time, the challenge will be for the locals to keep tourism at sustainable levels.

After Oslob, I stayed at the Ravenala Resort in Moalboal (www.ravenala-resort-moalboal.com), upon the invite of owner Robin Schaap. Ravenala is a quaint bed-and-breakfast right on White Beach and a short ride away from Pescador Island. Moalboal features a number of excellent dive spots and is an excellent weekend getaway from the pressures of city life.

Cereals and dance

It is summer after all, the best time in our country. Get in shape for summer by introducing Nestlé Fitness cereal into your daily menu. This low-cal, high-fiber meal is also fortified with calcium, iron and folic acid, making it an ideal breakfast.

My favorite is the Honey & Almond flavor, although it also comes in Whole Wheat and Fitnesse & Fruit variants. I'm pretty sure my Fitnesse diet will make me look slimmer in just a couple of weeks, especially as I am combining the meal with the latest exercise craze, Zumba Fitness.

Inspired by Latin dance, Zumba Fitness lets participants sweat it out without getting bored thanks to the fusion of exercise and music. Take a chance to try Zumba Fitness on March 31, as Nestlé sponsors the Fitnesse Shape Up Night. The party starts at 8 p.m. at the SMX Tent in Bonifacio Global City. This will be the biggest Zumba Fitness event in the country, so expect to sweat, spin, shimmy and shake with the help of Manila's top Zumba Fitness instructors.

KATRINA Joie Garcia and Carlo Dalisong

By Isabel Flores
Contributor

ON DEC. 7, 2011, two people took a quantum leap toward forever. Katrina Garcia, 27, and Carlo Dalisong, 31, were married at the Shrine of St. Thomas of the Child Jesus church, in Newport Boulevard, Pasay City.

The ceremony began at 2:30 p.m. and was officiated by Fr. Rolando R. Agustin.

Their story begins in the same fashion that some of the best love stories do: ordinarily, with a hint of magic. The couple met in the summer of 2002... Kat was 18 years old, a bright wide-eyed student in Assumption College. Carlo was 22, and an Electronics and Communications Engineering student at De La Salle University. They parted ways, not expecting to see each other again, yet as fate would have it, got reacquainted in 2005. They have been together ever since.

Katrina is the youngest daughter of Rene Garcia—the multi-awarded composer, lead guitarist, lead singer and co-founder of one of the most influential bands of the '70s, Hotdog.

Carlo, on the other hand, is the son of lawyer Romeo Dalisong, president and CEO of Southeast Asia Shipping Corp.

When Carlo proposed to Kat, the sun was setting and they were overlooking Manila Bay, a silhouette of ships in the background.

The motif of the wedding was grey and fuchsia. They chose fuchsia as a symbol of the blush people get on their faces when they meet the love of their life and fall in love. The entourage's gowns, as well as the bridal gown, were designed by Sanjay Florence, an up-and-coming designer in the Filipino fashion business.

The flowers, a variation of peonies, [illegible] roses, pink cymbidium orchids, dusty millers, carnations, tulips and burgundy calla lilies were courtesy of the famed florist and stylist, Teddy Manuel.

When the bride walked into the church, it seemed as if there was a collective catch in everyone's breath—she looked stunning. The inspiration behind her beautiful dress was her desire for a timeless, flowy sweeping gown with an embellished bodice. In the end, the unrivaled gown looked romantic, soft and sweet—vintage and classy yet modern and beautiful.

The reception was held at Blue Leaf Events Pavilion in McKinley Hill. The cocktails of the night included pink martinis with mushroom duxelle, prawn tails, smoked salmon with dill pistachio, snapper with rosemary and bacon in skewers—all served to the accompaniment of [illegible] music. Because the bride and groom wanted their guests to feel as if they were at a feast, the menu, which was especially curated by Hans, included three appetizers, 10 main course dishes and desserts which was a sugar rush of assorted cakes: Eclairs, Nirvana, Sans Rival, [illegible], Sago, assorted [illegible], fresh fruits in skewers, Tiramisu in demitasse cup, cream puffs, assorted macarons de paris, [illegible] and Jello.

The reception began with the entourage dancing into the hall, followed by the bride and the groom. They all performed a short choreographed dance number, a fun deviation from the usual solemn entrance.

To further break tradition, instead of the typical father-daughter dance, the bride's father dedicated and performed a song instead. Rene sang one of Hotdog's most timeless hits, "Ikaw Ang Miss Universe ng Buhay Ko." It was, perhaps, one of the most touching sights of a father finally giving away his daughter.

The Hotdog band went on to perform a few other hits and the crowd celebrated with them. There was much laughter and dancing that ensued, and the collective joy of everyone in the room seemed more than enough to send the couple off into the happily ever after they were, without a doubt, destined for.

THE NEWLYWEDS and their parents, Rene and [illegible] Garcia, the couple, Evelyn and lawyer Romeo Dalisong

WITH THE bride's family: Anna Garcia-Salgado, Joaquin Salgado, Patricia Salgado, Valerie Garcia, the couple, Rene Garcia, Eugene Salgado

CHEER FACTOR

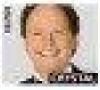

Wrinkles in the gags

DURING the Oscar Awards show, host Billy Crystal did his usual medley of movie nominees, plus a sketch with George Clooney urging him to host the show. Crystal announced "the youngest, hippest writers in town" — the camera panned to a group of old men.

These may well have been the writers. When Octavia Spencer won best supporting actress, Crystal joked that after he saw the movie, he wanted to hug the first black woman he saw. The line could have been used when Hattie McDaniel, first black actress to get an Oscar, won for "Gone With the Wind."

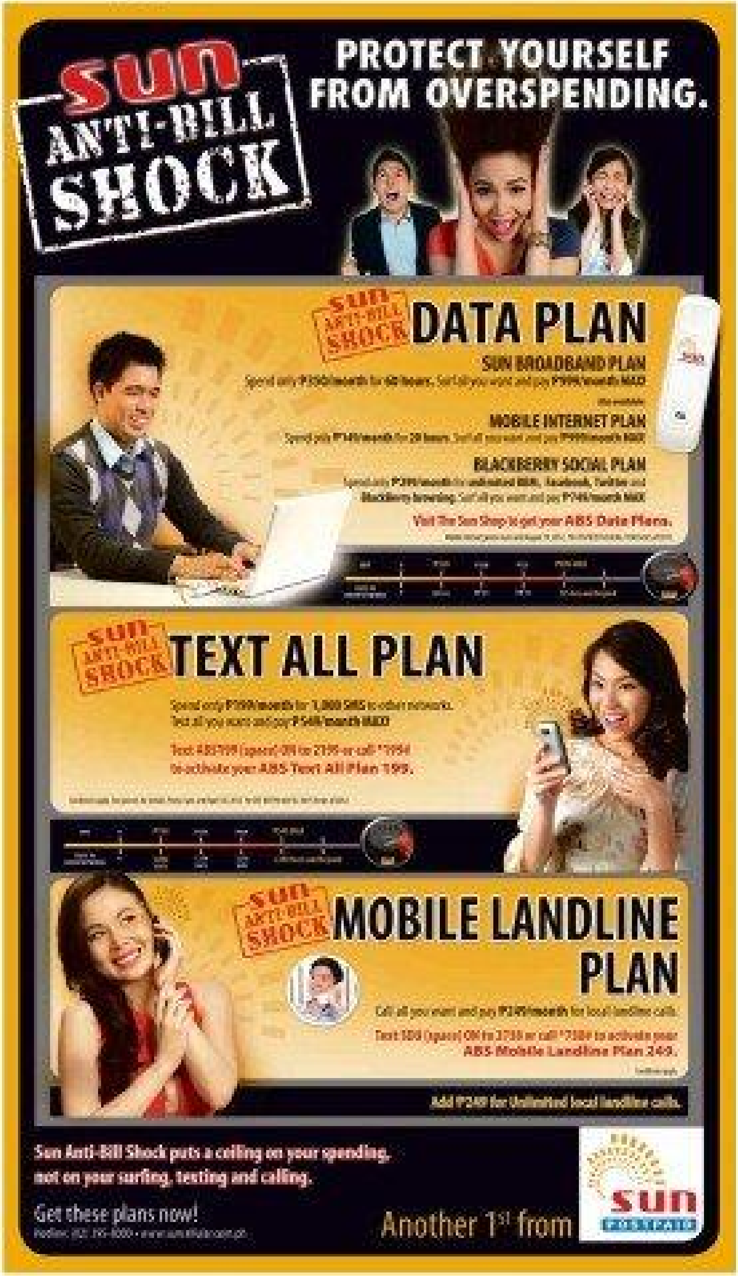

It's a competition, but it's less about winners and losers than it is about the ceremony's struggle to stay on top in a TV landscape cluttered with awards shows.

PRESIDENT Aquino on the way to the screening room

This Nat Geo docu is not just a look inside the Palace, but also a peek into P-Noy's innermost circle

By Bayani San Diego Jr.

DIRECTOR Marnie Manicad said she shot over 100 hours of footage for the documentary "Inside Malacañang," which premieres on the National Geographic Channel on March 13 at 9 p.m.

She said she went to great lengths to make this docu. She even flew in the PSG (Presidential Security Group) helicopter to capture a shot of President Aquino's convoy speeding on the Cavite highway, en route to the Independence Day celebration in Kawit, Cavite.

Cinematographer Sam Tamayo recalled a "dizzying" chopper ride. "It was windy that day. It was crazy," Manicad said.

Ultimate accolade

After the docu's special screening at the Malacañang Palace on Feb. 28, Manicad and her team, which included sound man Rally Magsaysay and colorist Marden Magsaysay, received the ultimate accolade.

In the audience was their famous subject, President Benigno Simeon Aquino III, who congratulated Manicad after the screening. "He said it was a job well done," Manicad recounted.

JAIME Castro, food tester, inspects food [illegible] in the kitchen with a flashlight.

Further, the President requested Manicad to furnish him a copy of a video included in the docu—an interview with the young P-Noy, as the President is more popularly known, held during a coup during the term of his mother, President Corazon Aquino, in 1987.

In the archival footage, P-Noy appears as a young man with a full head of hair and a bandaged ear. The docu explains that, although P-Noy survived the ambush, "a bullet remained embedded in his neck."

Manicad said, "He had been looking for a video of that interview for the longest time. I found it in the archives of GMA News."

Archival footage

The director, who's married to GMA news reporter Jiggy Manicad, worked previously as second-unit director on Regine shows "Love to Love" and "Marimar," and now directs GMA News TV programs [illegible].

For the Malacañang docu, she said she also used [illegible] archival footage from the news libraries of the government station PTV4 and the American TV network ABC.

The docu also showcases a day in the life of P-Noy, as seen through the eyes of the four men closest to him, namely: Army Col. Ramon Mateo Dizon, PSG commander; SPO4 [illegible], close-in security; SPO3 Jaime Castro, food tester; and Jay Morales, presidential photographer.

PRESIDENTIAL helicopter

They were all present during the screening at the Palace—and had to endure gentle ribbing and playful cheers from colleagues in the audience. "They were happy with the docu," Manicad said. "They thanked me for making them famous among their relatives."

Manicad noted that she enjoyed "overwhelming support" from all of P-Noy's men during the making of the video. "Col. Dizon and his operations chief, Maj. [illegible], gave us [illegible] unprecedented access."

The newfound fame of P-Noy's men will not be limited among their family and co-
